Researchers at the University of Toronto in Canada found that children who share housework show more feelings for family members than kids who don't. But not all jobs are equally good. The kids who did family-care jobs---setting the table or feeding pets---showed more concern for others than children who had only self-care responsibilities---tidying their own room and putting away their clothes.

45. What does this passage tell people?
- (A) Children should only do family-care jobs.
 - (B) Self-care jobs are not important at all.
 - (C) Some kinds of housework bring the family closer than others.
 - (D) If children don't share housework, they don't love you.
46. According to the passage, who might care more about other family members?
- (A) A child who often cleans his bedroom.
 - (B) A child who does homework every day.
 - (C) A child who washes his dishes after dinner.
 - (D) A child who sweeps the living room floor

Mr. Magnusson was having the worst day of his life. At work, he was accused of stealing by his coworkers. On his way home, he was stopped by the police for speeding and got his license suspended. The police took his car away, so he had to walk home. When he got home, he found his wife's things outside the front door. She said that she was leaving him, and was taking the kids with her. At that moment they both turned their attention to his heartbeat-powered watch, which was beating much faster than usual.

Mr. Magnusson woke up in the hospital. He couldn't remember how he got here. There was a text message hovering in front of his face. It read, "Mr. Magnusson, you suffered from a mild heart attack two weeks ago and have been asleep since then. It was a minor attack, and you have nothing to worry about." Mr. Magnusson screamed. That meant he hadn't been to work in three weeks! Another text message flew in front of him. It read, "Magnusson. You're fired. Don't come to work tomorrow." He couldn't believe what was happening to him. It was like living a nightmare. Finally, a third text message stopped in front of him. It read, "Dear Mr. Magnusson, you are experiencing a severe heart attack. Please remain calm."

He was wondering why the message was telling him he was having a heart attack, and not a doctor.
